About the service

Greenacres is part of Gladstone Childcare Ltd which provides four registered services in Fife. It is registered to provide care for up to four young people at a time. Their mission statement says: "Gladstone Childcare provides for the care of children/young people through meeting the social, emotional, behavioural and recreational needs of its service users within the residential facility of one of the Gladstone projects. There was a team leader and senior practitioner in each of the four services, overseen by the registered manager.

At Gladstone Childcare the children/young people are engaged in a warm, accepting and child centred relationship with adults to combine in the creation of a warm, caring and nurturing environment. Consistency, reliability and an ability to engage effectively with the child/young person and their family is deemed to be the most critical element that underpins our work, with unconditional positive regard and respect being offered to both. Our commitment to partnership working, including the child/young person, families, social services, education, health services, etc., is a key element in our service of short, medium or long-term provision."

Greenacres is set within five acres of ground and is situated in a rural setting approximately two miles from Anstruther, in the East Neuk of Fife. It is around one hour and thirty minutes drive from Edinburgh and forty minutes from Dundee.

At the time of the inspection, there were four young people living at Greenacres, aged 14, 14, 15 and 15.

What people told us

We spoke individually with one young person during the inspection, and joined the group informally over a mealtime. We received four completed Care Standards Questionnaires (CSQs) from young people. In these, two young people 'strongly agreed' and two 'agreed' with the statement "Overall I am happy with the quality of care I get here."

We saw that young people were relaxed and confident in their interactions with the adults caring for them. Comments were very positive and included:

"I'd give them 10 out of 10, there's nothing they could do better."

"I'd like there to be no arguments but that's other young people, not staff."

"You can go to any member of staff if you had a concern or were upset."

Self assessment

The Care Inspectorate did not request a self assessment for this inspection. We took account of the service's improvement plan as part of our assessment.

From this inspection we graded this service as:

Quality of care and support	5 - Very Good
Quality of environment	not assessed
Quality of staffing	not assessed
Quality of management and leadership	5 - Very Good

What the service does well

We saw that there were very positive relationships between the young people and the adults caring for them, and spontaneous laughter and affection. This helped the young people feel safe and cared for. It was evident from this that the young people had confidence in the adults around them, laughing and joking with them.

Comprehensive care plans were in place, which provided staff with clear guidance about what was needed from them in order to meet each young person's needs. These were agreed with the young people and reviewed regularly, so that progress was recognised and changes made to the support if required. It was evident that the service worked closely with other professionals involved with the children/young people, and kept them updated, as well as with the children/young people's families/carers.

Care plans were linked with individual crisis management plans where children/young people's likely behaviours were identified. These included strategies which could be used by staff and the children/young people in order to help prevent them from becoming anxious or agitated, and to minimise the impact from their anxiety or agitation.

Significant events during the young person's time in the service were recorded in chronologies colour coded to highlight different areas of their care; positive events as well as those of concern. They were helping staff plan changes to children/young people's care plans as a result.

Young people were registered with local healthcare services; GP, local pharmacy, dentist and optician and appropriate referrals were made to specialist healthcare services where necessary. Systems for medication were effective, and audited regularly to make sure any discrepancies were identified and rectified promptly. Young people were encouraged to develop healthy lifestyles. They were provided with a range of healthy, nutritious meals, encouraging them to try a variety of menus and learning about different foods and recipes, while taking account of their preferences. Since our last inspection the service had introduced a system of individual hand towels, which helped prevent the spread of infection.

Staff were trained in child protection and were aware of the risks of child sexual exploitation for the young people living in Greenacres. They were aware of the hazards presented by young people's use of the internet and social media, and put in place systems to prevent inappropriate use.

There was evidence of a strong, clear vision for the services of Gladstone Childcare, which was shared by staff and supported by the board of directors. The management structure allowed for career progression, and for staff to take on individual responsibilities. Staff worked closely with partner agencies to provide support for young people, including advocating on their behalf. The organisation linked with others in the sector and promoted the provision of high quality care through the wider community.

The manager and team leader had a direct overview of practice, and an on-call system ensured that staff could receive management support at any time. The manager and team leader led by example to help embed the organisation's ethos in practice. They were proactive in looking to make continued improvements leading to the best outcomes for young people. Staff and young people confirmed they were confident in approaching the manager or team leader with any concerns or suggestions. They met regularly which allowed for reflection on practice and opportunities to plan developments, leading to the service development plan. We saw that there were systems in place for audit throughout the service and to the board of directors.

What the service could do better

The service should continue to develop their care plans to identify where progress was made and highlight small steps made towards achieving outcomes. They should continue to help staff keep updated in advances in technology, internet use and social media to help keep young people safe.

We discussed the information held about young people. We advised that where the service were given information by third parties, which may impact on the support required, the accuracy of the information was verified.

We advised that the organisation looked at ways to increase independent advocacy for young people, and direct overview by board members so that children/young people had direct access to pass on their views.
